Memory and charm of the "Ice city"

The foyer of the Town Hall in Canazei, hosts a show dedicated to the "Ice city", until the 20th September (from 8.30 a.m. to 7.00 p.m.). On view, around sixty old pictures and an illustrative label developing for eight metres along the outer structure of the lift.

The myth of this work, thanks to its hardihood and quick disappearance, keeps growing, even after 100 years. This is why there is always interest towards "The ice city", also core of the today's meeting, at 9.00 p.m. in Piazz Marconi square in Canazei, conducted by Andrea De Bernardin, founder of the Museum of the Great War 1914 – 1918 at Fedaia. De Bernardin has collected, among the snow on Marmolada, many evidences of that particular work of galleries, dormitories and emplacements built to move without being seen by the enemy, returned by the mountain after the movements and the melting of the glacier. The city, designed by the Landesschütze engineer Leo Handl in 1916 and reproduced by the Italian troops, was abandoned in 1917, after Caporetto.

Passed under the Italian Army Property it became a warehouse. In 1927 it was sold to privates and partially demolished to recover iron materials.
