The (real) Turks at Moena's festival

The legend tells that Turchia quarterhood dues its name to an Ottoman soldier that escaped from the War in Wien in 1663 and, trying to go back home, fainted exhausted among the houses of this area of Moena. The people took care of him and he settled in the village.

A real "Ottoman" delegation at "Festa di Turchia". After yesterday night's inauguration with Moena music band's concert and the today's opening at 10.00 a.m., with craftsmanship and Ladin tasting stands and with stands from the crescent's country, today at 5.00 p.m., the party is really getting going: "Grop de Turchia" parades along the quarterhood's roads, with the sultan (from Moena) guiding soldiers with sabers and fezzes and charming paramours. But this year the traditional parade, recalling the history and legends on this part of Moena, hosts special guests: the Turkish group "Kocaeli Eitim Gençlik Ve Spor Kulubu". Tonight, at 9.00 p.m. at "Tabià del Coronzin" hayloft, Enrosadira choir in concert, while in Piazz de Turchia square, music with "Die Verspielten".

Easy walks

Discovering Soraga Alta

This easy but pleasant walk starts at the playground in Soraga: pass the gangway and go left along the river Avisio, then climb the ramp that leads to the forest road that comes down from Soraga Alta. Go left following the flat track until you reach Hotel La Molinella, then leave it to go up on the right. Pass the barrier and go straight. When you reach the crossroads, take the right and follow the signals of "Percorso Natura". The climb, sometimes steep, ends suddenly. Go on along a flat track and go down on the right, along a comfortable path at the limit of the meadows, crowning Soraga Alta. Enter the hamlet and going lightly on the right, walk on the last stretch of Strada de Ghergehele street. Continue on the dirt road that goes towards the river Avisio and to the gangway met at the beginning.

Did you know that...

San Pellegrino hospice has a very long story. It was built in 1358 on the territories of the Regola of Moena by the "White Monks" as a recovery for those that were going from Fassa to the Agordino (BL). The hospice hosted also the ill and were buried those who perished for the strains of the pilgrimage. In 1400 the hospice's management passed to a monk named by the Regola of Predazzo, then to the Prince Bishop of Trento. The municipality of Moena plans to restore the building, recovering place for expositions about geology and the Great War.
