"Pera jent" who has lived the war

The meeting about the first world conflict, today at 9.00 p.m. in Fontanazzo, by the Town Council meeting room in the municipality of Mazzin, concerns "Gran Vera e pera jent" (The Great War and poor people, in Ladin). Professor Cesare Bernard talks about the social situation in Val di Fassa, that was part of the Austrian-Hungarian Empire, at the war burst. At that time, the valley lived of livestock and agriculture, that guaranteed a subsistence's economy. That's why men used to emigrate seasonally to Tyrol, to work as decorators, carpenters and bricklayers. The war subverted the existent balances, first with the departure of the youths to the eastern frontline, and then from 1915, when the conflict moved also to this peaks, with the arrival of the troopers from far regions, illnesses and hunger.

Did you know that...

In the XIX Century, few innovations had been introduced in the agriculture of Fassa that had remained. For techniques and practice, similar to that of the two previous centuries. Many products, important for the survival of the people, such as corn and wheat flour, were bought somewhere else. In Val di Fassa, the highest of the valleys in Trentino, the fields suitable for plantation were few, so the fields, both on the bottom of the valley and at the half of the mountain, on territories not to steep, were mostly placed on the right of the stream Avisio, to obtain the biggest exposure to the sun.

To participate in the initiatives for guests is compulsory to register at least one day in advance at the Tourist Offices of the Val di Fassa Card (ask your employer accommodation). The activities are reserved for guests of the associated structures all'Apt Val di Fassa.
