Bletterbach and the "great" dinosaurs on show

Bletterbach or Rio delle Foglie (the stream that has created a deep channel in the rock), that is set between Passo Oclini and Aldino (reachable from the near Val di Fiemme), is a fantastic canyon to cross as well as one of the Unesco World Heritage sites in the Dolomites. The water flow has been digging a way 8 km long and 400 m deep since the ice age (during several geologic time). Very ancient reptiles' footprints, sea fossils and plants tracks have been found in this place (open until October from 9.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m.; cost € 4.00; free under 5 years old). Moreover, until the 7th of September in Egna along Rio Trodena, the exposition "World of Dinosaurs – on the tracks of the dinosaurs" can be visited: a magnificent exposition in the open air, reproducing full-size dinosaurs.

Did you know that...

One of the geologists who first wrote about the central Dolomites was count Marzari Pencati from Vicenza who, in 1819, rejected the theory, prevailing at that time, that considered the volcanic rocks older than the sedimentary ones, taking Canzoccoli, near Predazzo, as an example. But he was discredited by the famous German geologist Leopold von Buch who considered Fassa and Fiemme the key to interpret the geologic story of the Alps. Later studies on Val Monzoni, associated to the area of Predazzo, especially those of 1876 by Edmund von Mojsisovics proved Marzari Pencati right.
