Patrizia Laquidara sings on Ciampac

Patrizia Laquidara (photo), thanks to her voice, can sing both contemporary music and author jazz. The singer boasts collaborations with: Arto Lindsay, Ben Perowsky, Smokey Horlem, Tom Bartlett, Stefano Bollani, Rita Marcotulli and Mario Venuti.

The hollow of Ciampac is the ideal location for the concert of the gentle voice of Patrizia Laquidara that performs today at 2.00 p.m. in an entrancing panoramic frame, easy to reach from Alba in few minutes. She is the winner of the prize Tenco in 2011 for the best album in dialect "Il canto dell'anguana" (anguana is the nymph in the Ladin mythology), and today proposes some of her most famous pieces among which "Lividi e fiori" (winner of thecritics prize at the Festival di Sanremo 2003), and "Noite Luar", part of the soundtrack of the film "Manuale d'amore" by Giovanni Veronesi. Laquidara has always tried to combine her musical attitude with cinematographic experience since her debut, and worked on not only soundtracks but also played roles as actress in some films.

Historical outings

From Moena to the wood boundary stones

This outing lets you relive the fascinating history of Val di Fassa, looking for boundary stones that in the past defined the Bishopric of Bressanone and Trento. Nowadays these boundary stones are concealed in paths surrounded by woods of Norway Spruces and Scotch Pines. From Sotergrava Square in Moena, ascend Street Salejada and Street de Moene. When you are at Hotel alle Alpi, turn left and continue upwards on Street Saslonch, which turns into a dirt road and reaches Col de Soldai. From here, follow the road that leads to Soraga. Along the path, then, cross the meadow of Palua, until you reach the forest road that ascends to Soraga. On the external turn towards Moena, go upwards into the wood, following the borderline between the two villages, where you will find the boundary stones. You come back following the same route.

"Theodor Christomannos", a guide for the Dolomites

The book written by Silvano Faggioni with the title "Theodor Christomannos. Geniale pioniere del turismo nelle Dolomiti" is a real journey through the peaks of the World Heritage Unesco. The text (published by Mondadori, 190 pages, 18 €) is presented tonight at 9.00 p.m. in Piazz Marconi in Canazei for the festival ParoleVistaDolomiti, and tells about the intense life of the entrepreneur who gave fame to hotels, refuges in the Dolomites and above all the Strada delle Dolomiti (the streets that connects Bolzano to Cortina, which celebrated its 100 years in 2009). A very interesting feature of the book is "Christomannos guida" that lets you discover the Dolomites. The indications were to cover the roads on foot, by coach or by the first cars, but also he recommended some luxurious hotels that pampered their hosts.

Did you know that...

As a legend goes, a sly countrywoman created the famous dumplings called "Canederli" in the region Trentino-Alto Adige. One day some Lanzichenecci (soldiers of the Sacred Roman Empire) came to her, who lived in a farmstead house, and demanded the lunch. The countrywoman and her daughters took few leftovers: old bread, onions, eggs, flour, herbs and some speck. The woman mixed all and made big dumplings that cooked in boiling water. The soldiers ate all and they were so satisfied that left the women two gold coins as a tip.

To participate in the initiatives for guests is compulsory to register at least one day in advance at the Tourist Offices of the Val di Fassa Card (ask your employer accommodation). The activities are reserved for guests of the associated structures all'Apt Val di Fassa.
