Itineraries

FROM POZZA TO MALGA CROCIFISSO

This is an "easy walk" that starts from the nice hamlet of Meida, in the immediate surroundings of Pozza di Fassa: start ascending Strada de Meida street that turns into Strada Ruf de Ruacia street. You will get nearby a bridge that passes over the stream Ruf de Sèn Nicolò, in the nearest of the Restaurant La Soldanella. Before reaching the bridge take the dirt road on the right. The route begins climbing feebly, than it becomes steeper and steeper while you go up, through a short series of hairpin turns, passing through woods and grazing. Afterwards, the track becomes flat again, until it links to the paved street of Val San Nicolò. Following another short stretch you reach the hut Malga Crocifisso (1526 m). To go back follow the paved street towards the village.

The complete schedule of events is available in the tourist offices of the valley.

Did you know that...

On 26th December 1805 Tyrol was taken away from the Hapsburgs and annexed to the Kingdom of Bavaria, a French client state to which also Val di Fassa was aggregated. At first the valley was under the domain of Chiusa in Val d'Isarco, but in March 1807 the "Giudizio di Cavalese" (relying on Bolzano) took it. In 1808, South Tyrol was divided in two areas, the Adige's with the main city Trento, to which belonged Fassa as well, and the Isarco's. The new state made authoritative reforms and began a fight against the local Church, arousing in that way the irritation of mountain's people.

Initiatives reserved to guests with the Val di Fassa Card (ask your hotel/apartment) enrolments required by the previous day at the Tourist Offices. Activities are reserved for guests of the associated structures of Val di Fassa Tourist Board
