Itineraries

FOLLOWING AGATHA CHRISTIE FOOTPRINTS

In the twenties, the famous and appreciated crime writer Agatha Christie sojourned in the nearest of Carezza Lake, near Vigo di Fassa, and was really enthusiastic about the area. Even in her crime novel "The Big Four" she recorded her pleasant staying in the Dolomites, describing the rocky Latemar Labyrinth that hid an outlawed mob. This easy itinerary starts from the west limit of the lake on path n. 11. Following the track you will reach a crossroads: both the paths bring to the forest hut of Mitterleger where you can find path n. 20, which leads to the mysterious Labyrinth. Overstep some larches and enter in the landslip that shapes the maze of the Dolomites. Descend towards a hollow where a pond regenerates every summer. Here you will find a couple of paths to go back to Carezza Lake.

Did you know that...

In the ancient times, merchants and inhabitants of Pera used to go to Tires across the Catinaccio for their trades. They usually reach the Vajolet valley reaching the inn "Alla Rosa" in Soial then, the Gardeccia hollow aiming towards west at the "Buj de Davoi" (the devil hole). Other itineraries were "Forcela de Davoi" or, reaching Gardeccia coming from north, the "Porte Neigre". Once reached the top of the Vajolet valley, wayfarers used to cross the Sella del Principe, so called because the Prince Bishop of Bressanone passed here when he visited Val di Fassa. From here across the Conca del Principe and Val Ciamin, they reached Tires.
