Did you know that...

Paul Preuss (1886-1913) was a famous Austrian climber, who defined 6 rules to keep in mind when in the mountains: 1. be good enough to overcome difficulties; 2. the difficulties that have to be overcome during the descent are the extreme limit of the one that have to be faced during the ascent; 3. artificial means can be used only in case of immediately danger; 4. the spikes can be used only in case of emergency; 5. the rope eases the climb, but is not an essential element; 6. the single safety is the maximum principle every alpinist has to conquer.
