Itineraries

ALONG THE PATH OF AGATHA CHRISTIE

In the twenties, the famous and appreciated crime writer Agatha Christie sojourned in the nearest of Carezza Lake, near Vigo di Fassa, and was really enthusiastic about the area. Even in her crime novel “The Big Four” she recorded her pleasant staying in the Dolomites, describing the rocky Latemar Labyrinth that hid an outlawed mob. This easy itinerary starts from the west limit of the lake on path n. 11. Following the track you will reach a crossroads: both the paths bring to the forest hut of Mitterleger where you can find path n. 20, which leads to the mysterious Labyrinth. Overstep some larches and enter in the landslip that shapes the maze of the Dolomites. Descend towards a hollow where a pond regenerates every summer. Here you will find a couple of paths to go back to Carezza Lake.

The complete schedule of events is available in the tourist offices of the valley.

Did you know that...

On 26th December 1805 Tyrol was taken away from the Hapsburgs and annexed to the Kingdom of Bavaria, a French client state to which also Val di Fassa was aggregated. At first the valley was under the domain of Chiusa in Val d’Isarco, but in March 1807 the “Giudizio di Cavalese” (relying on Bolzano) took it. In 1808, South Tyrol was divided in two areas, the Adige’s with the main city Trento, to which belonged Fassa as well, and the Isarco’s. The new state made authoritative reforms and began a fight against the local Church, arousing in that way the irritation of mountain’s people.
