Did you know that...

During the first year of the Great War, Austro-Hungarian soldiers received a ration of food which included: 700 gr. of bread, 400 gr of beef meat and 140 gr of pulses or vegetables, all completed by two cubes of coffee ersatz, some wine or beer. Italian soldiers, on the other hand, consumed more carbohydrates with a ration of: 600 gr of bread, 100 gr of meat with pasta or rice, a quarter litre of wine, grappa, liqueur and coffee. From 1916, when the plantations were halved and the livestock decimated, soldiers (as well as the people) saw their food ration reduced both in quantity and quality.

Initiatives reserved to the guests with the Val di Fassa Card (ask your hotel/apartment). Enrolments required within the previous day by the Tourist Offices. The activities are reserved to the guests of the associated structures of Val di Fassa Tourist Board.
