

"Arlecchino si fa in tre" is a reduction for three actors of "The servant of two masters" by Carlo Goldoni.

HIGHLIGHT

"ARLECCHINO TORN IN THREE" IN VAL DI FASSA

The best comedy represented tonight at 9 p.m. by the theatre in Campitello with "Arlecchino si fa in tre - Arlecchino torn in three", the show of the company "Bottegavaga" from Venezia, just returned from the success at the "Edinburg Fringe Festival". On stage tonight, there is an international version of "The servant of two masters" by Carlo Goldoni, in which Italian and English intertwine continuously. A linguistic game that can be enjoyed by everybody: listen the original text together with an unpublished Goldoni "as he was" Shakespeare, laugh at the improbable English spoken by the masks that rises the humor of the text, increasing the number of the misunderstandings and of the nonsense. On the stage: Vanni Carpenedo, extraordinary interpreter of "Arlecchino", Betty Andriolo and Christian Renzicchi, directed by Alberta Toninato.

Did you know that...

"Tobià" or "tabià", that's how the hayloft is called in Ladin. The most ancient structure was completely in wood but, with the time, it would be integrated with a basement in dry stone. The Tobià, attached but separated from the house, used to host the stable at the lower floor, with the "cianèl, the wooden manger and the foodstuff storage. On the upper floor there was the hayloft, with the "palancins" and the "barcons" (balconies), that would often have given access to the ramp or to the bridge (in stone or dirt), on which the "cèr" or "masaria da fen", the wagon charged with hay, would be pushed with just the strength of the arms.
