Itineraries

FROM POZZA TO MALGA CROCIFFISSO

This is an "easy walk" that starts from the nice hamlet of Meida, in the immediate surroundings of Pozza di Fassa: start ascending Strada de Meida street that turns into Strada Ruf de Ruacia street. You will get nearby a bridge that passes over the stream Ruf de Sèn Nicolò, in the nearest of the Restaurant La Soldanella. Before reaching the bridge take the dirt road on the right. The route begins climbing feebly, than it becomes steeper and steeper while you go up, through a short series of hairpin turns, passing through woods and grazing. Afterwards, the track becomes flat again, until it links to the paved street of Val San Nicolò. Following another short stretch you reach the hut Malga Crocifisso (1526 m). To go back follow the paved street towards the village.

Did you know that...

Rumors have been saying for centuries that the cardinal Nicolò Cusano (bishop of Bressanone from 1450 to 1464) consecrated the Church of Santa Giulana in 1452. Actually, the evidence that Cusano have been in Val di Fassa were found only recently. In a small chapel under the main altar of the church, a lead chest was brought to light: it contained a parchment with Cusano's seal a (shrimp), together with the relicts that used to be put under the altars on the occasion of the consecration of Giuliana, Dorotea, Innocenzo, Andrea, Albano and Ingenuino.
