HIGHLIGHTS

BOÈ "THE SOUNDS" OF SIGNUMFIVE

The band's members are four saxophonists (and sometimes an accordionist), that is; Blaž Kemperle (sax soprano), Alan Lužar (sax tenore), Erik Nestler (sax alto) and David Brand (sax baritono), performing today at 1 p.m. by Rifugio Boè. Exceptionally, for the festival "The Sounds of Dolomites", the band is enriched by a fourth musician: the percussionist Volker Reichling. The SIGUMfive boast a wide repertoire from classical music to jazz and the Balkan rhythms. Today's playlist includes songs by Grieg (from "Holberg's Time" op. 40), Gershwin (suite on opera folk themes "Porgy and Bess"), Pedro Iturralde ("Pequeña Czárda") and Izidor Leitinger ("Suita Quasi Balkanica"). The location is reachable from Passo Pordoi by cable car to Sass Pordoi (2950m a.s.l.) and from here to Boè (3152m) walking about 1.30 hours.

Itineraries

FROM MOENA TO THE BOUNDARY STONES IN THE WOOD

This track recalls the fascinating history of Val di Fassa, looking for some boundary stones that once were the borderline between the Bishopric of Bressanone and Trento, now camouflaged along paths plunged among Norway Spruces and Scotch Pines woods. From Piazz de Sotegrava square in Moena, climb Strada Salejada and Strada de Moene streets. Reached Hotel Alle Alpi, turn left and ascend Strada Saslonch street, that permits to reach the locality called "Col dei Soldai". From here, follow the street towards Soraga. Along the path, cross the green meadows of Palua, till you meet the first road that ascends from Soraga. On the outer hairpin turn towards Moena, ascend to the wood that follows the borderline between the two villages, where the boundary stones are. Come back along the same route.

Did you know that...

The group of Catinaccio has always been dividing the people speaking different idioms and that have different cultures: on the west side live the people of Val d'Ega and Tires, both German speaking, while on the east side of this long mountain chain we find the Ladins, with their particular language, result of an ancient fusion between the Raetic language and Ladin. People of South Tyrol call this mountain "Rosengarten", from the legend of King Laurin and his flowered garden, while Ladins call it "Ciadenac".
